Group decries Broadview mayor's limits on protests at ICE facility

ICE protesters in Broadview took their concerns to the village board on Monday night.

"I witnessed agents hitting people on the ground who were doing nothing," protester Amanda Tovar told officials, describing a viral incident in which Rev David Black was struck in the head by pepper balls fired by federal agents.

Activists said that incident underscores why they must remain closer to the facility and stay later into the evening.

Illinois State Police physically confronted protesters last Saturday who refused to leave after 6 p.m., prompting accusations of excessive force.
